SESSION 5

GOALS

As students experience this session in Colossians, they will…

- discover a hefty set of commands in chapter 3.
- make the connection between gratitude for what God has done for us and obedience to what He asks of us.
- be challenged to adopt these commands as a way of life.

MATERIALS: Group

- colored pencils

MATERIALS: Each Student

- student journal pages for Session 6
- Colossians Scripture sheets
- a Bible, pen, and notebook

Prayer

Once your students have their coffee drinks, give them a moment to exhale the pressures of the day. Then pray that God will take the group to a new level of obedience with today's study.

Review

To stay connected to the big themes in Colossians, ask a few review questions.

What was God's big secret?
He intended for the Gentiles to be part of the plan all along. Through Jesus, Israel's Messiah, He was going to bring together Jews and Gentiles to establish the Church.

What were the five eras of God's plan that we looked at?

- The mystery was in place before time began.
- God gradually rolled things out to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, choosing them and their offspring (Israel) to someday be a blessing to all nations.
- God let Israel know that someday everyone (including Gentiles) would get to enjoy the promises of God—that is, without first becoming a member of Israel.
- Jesus began His ministry by going to the lost sheep of Israel. He concluded His earthly ministry by sending His apostles to all nations (Gentiles) and establishing the Church (the people, not the building), in which His Spirit would dwell.
- Mystery explained: Jesus is the point of the mystery! The coming of the Messiah is how God made the offspring of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob a blessing to all peoples.

What does understanding this mystery do for us?
It keeps us from being deceived by fine-sounding arguments.

Bonus Question: Who was the first person ever to get in on God's secret?
Abraham

OPEN

Intro your subject matter by discussing these questions:

How do you respond when someone does something nice for you out of the blue—a "random act of kindness"?

How would you define gratitude?

What's the best way to express gratitude?

Can you fake gratitude? If so, how?
Use this question to distinguish between saying you're grateful (words) and showing your gratitude (deeds). Actions are the true indication of gratitude.

DIGGING IN

Before diving into Colossians, explain this pattern in Paul's letters:

Paul usually spends a large section teaching about all God has done for us through Jesus. In the shorter letters, like Colossians, this takes up the first half of the book. Then Paul shifts gears and spends the second half of the book describing the behavior grateful people should display based on all he's described. In this session, we hit that transition in Colossians.

Then ask students to designate a symbol they could use to mark the instructions and commands in Colossians. (If they're short on ideas, suggest a megaphone, a bold exclamation point, or two stone tablets.)

Have them read Colossians 3:1–17 from their Scripture sheets and do this:

Mark every instruction or command you find with the symbol we designated.

When most have finished, ask them to look back at what they marked. Ask whether any patterns or themes stand out in these commands. Can any of the commands be grouped into categories? Here are some categories your group may see:

-Commands about the personal spiritual life.
-Commands aimed at group life.
-Instructions related to external behavior.
-Instructions related to internal changes.
-Commands connected to thankfulness.
-Commands that use colorful imagery like "put to death," "put on your new self," or "clothe yourselves."

After identifying a few categories, explain that this chapter is a mini-version of Paul's other letters in that most of the commands are linked to something that's been done for us by God.

Ask students to read the passage a second time and do this:

> Using a different color, underline the reminders of things God did for us. Key words to look for include "since," "for," and "therefore."

Draw your students' attention to their journal page for Session 6 and explain the chart under "Taking It Inward" in your own words:

> We're going to complete this chart together. In the middle column you'll see a place to list every command we found that's connected to a reminder (these are already noted in the left column). If a command doesn't seem to be connected to a reminder, we'll list it in the last row of the chart. The right column is where it gets personal. After we list the commands you'll rate yourself on a scale from 1 to 5 as to how well you're doing at keeping each command.

Ask students to share their thoughts about which commands are connected to which reminders and invite them to fill in the chart as you discuss. The exercise is printed below for leader reference.

After your list is fairly complete, give students a few minutes to evaluate their adherence to the commands by rating their obedience factor in the far-right column.

Reminders	Commands	My 1-5 Rating
I've been raised with Christ. (v. 1)	-Set your heart on things above. (v. 1) -Set your mind on things above, not earthly things. (v. 2)

TAKING IT INWARD—Group

After they have had a few minutes to rate themselves, discuss the following questions.

Which command(s) got the lowest rating?

Which command(s) convicted you the most? Did any personal situations come to mind?

What do you think things would be like around here if we took these commands seriously? (Think about personal interaction, ministry potential, and the way outsiders view the group.)

Ask them to choose three commands—either the three most convicting, the three that scored lowest, or their top three priorities—and write them down on a napkin or in their journal pages. Give them a few minutes to pray and think about one specific action they could take in the next 24 hours, in order to obey each command. They should write that action down next to the corresponding command.

Then ask any volunteers to share one of their actions. You may want to set up accountability partners to encourage follow-through on these commands.

Use a few of the following questions to help your students take Colossians 3:1–17 to heart.

What do you make of the connections between things God did for us (the "Reminders" column) and what He's asking us to do?

Agree or disagree? If these reminders don't cause a wave of gratitude to come over us, then we're out of touch with what God has done in our lives!

If your gratitude for what God has done for you is measured by how well you measure up to Colossians 3, how grateful are you?

When a group of believers obeys these instructions, a whole lot of love, honesty and forgiveness is generated. It's an atmosphere you can't find anyplace else on earth! So on a scale from 1 to 10, how willing are you to do what it takes to generate this atmosphere? (Poll the group and average their responses.)

If the average score was between 1 and 5, ask:

Why so low? Do we want that kind of atmosphere? What is it we're not willing to give up to get there?

If the average score was between 6 and 10, ask:

What can we start doing right now to be a Colossians 3 group?

PUTTING INTO PRACTICE

Stress the following to your students:

It's easy to want the invigorating atmosphere, especially since it can cause our group to grow in numbers. And it's easy to make a list of these commands and enjoy clicking them off as we do them. But the real motivator for being the people God wants us to be is gratitude for what God has done for us.

Give students time to create and share their Colossians Takeaway with each other before dismissing. Suggest that they create something along the lines of doing what it takes to be a Colossians 3 follower of Christ.
